

Inspired of Snow

If man is a mist an illusion produced by condensation blown away by a breath, then man is also rain and snow, especially snow because of the flakes, mini-creations within the Big One – the One each becomes pooled together again.
Though grandeur may be admired in each descent those eyes are yet short-lived same as a memory apart from the whole, alone – Ha! Sense the illusion of gravity, when ever in time one runs toward One like drops to a stream.

©2007 Judy Hays-Eberts
2/28/07